OUABACHE
STATE PARK

This area of Wells County was occupied by the Miami Indians whose villages flanked the banks of the Wabash River. In 1829, the first settler built a cabin near here along the river. After the Indians were removed to reservations in Kansas and Oklahoma during the 1830's and 40's, the area was rapidly settled and cleared for farming.

Ouabache was first acquired and operated as the Wells County State Forest and Game Preserve in the early 1930's. By this time the area had been cleared of most of its mature timber stands and was severely eroded. The area gradually returned to a more natural state through the efforts of the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) and the WPA (Works Progress Administration) programs of reforestation and land management. Major activities included constructing the various buildings and shelters of native stone and timber, nursery plantings, and the development of the game preserve. At one time the park was widely acclaimed as the "Greatest Wildlife Laboratory in the United States" for its efforts in raising pheasants, quail, raccoons and rabbits. It soon became one of the largest producers of pheasant and quail chicks in the nation. One can still see remnants of the old pens along some of the trails.

By the early 1960's the game-raising program was phased out and in 1962 the park was designated Ouabache State Recreation Area, administered by the Division of State Parks. Since then changes have been made, and other than some of the original buildings, the park scarcely resembles its early existence. Finally, in 1983 the State Recreation Area classification was dropped and Ouabache became a State Park. Ouabache now features a modern campground, olympic-size swimming pool, seasonal naturalist service, picnic areas, play fields, boating, fishing, and tennis and basketball courts. A wildlife exhibit featuring American Bison, commonly known as Buffalo, is located just north of the firetower.

An added feature of Ouabache is an asphalt bike trail, accessible at the entrance gate house, which connects to a Rivergreenway Trail outside our boundaries and follows the Wabash River to the east edge of Bluffton. The 10 foot wide paved trail is popular with hikers and joggers also. The entire trail is approximately 3 miles in length. No motorized vehicles of any kind are permitted on the trail.

The Wabash River winds along the southern edge of the park, while County Road 100 South is the northern boundary. Many types of wildlife such as deer, fox, and squirrels are frequently seen along our roads and throughout the park. Motorists should be alert to park visitors and wildlife. Please obey posted speed limits and drive cautiously.
